mywebpal.com: Web surfing can lead to unexpected - and unwanted - places

The Internet may be a remarkably useful tool, but it also is packed with perils and pitfalls. [...] A search of the Internet, aided by Morales, yielded material that ranged from "how-to" guides for making bombs to hate literature posing as legitimate research to graphic descriptions of how to commit suicide or even murder. For instance, a search for information on suicide led to a large number of links providing information on suicide prevention and statistics. It also linked to a site providing information about how to write a suicide note and the best ways to kill yourself.
